A Rare Trophy Presented to the Third Infantry

With his customary patriotic zeal, Captain Louis H. Schmidt, Commissary, Third Infantry, has presented to the regiment a unique and valuable collection of primitive and modern firearms. The weapons represent every epoch of American history from the earliest beginnings to the present time. The collection is said to be the most complete of the kind in the world. Captain Schmidt spent many years and considerable money in gathering the pieces together, and the present is one which is naturally greatly appreciated by Colonel Biddle and the regiment generally. The collection is to serve as a trophy, and to be awarded to the company making the highest general average of efficiency, including rifle practice, inspection, and general field work. As early as the official reports determine, the trophy will be placed in the company quarters for final possession.

Captain Schmidt has been been regarded as one of the best informed authorities on firearms in the country, and his general collection is considered the best in the United States to-day. The weapons presented to the Third Regiment are of a most instructive nature, and clearly demonstrate the remarkable development of the small arm from the cumbersome blunderbuss to the efficient automatic revolver of to-day. The exhibits are each of a distinct character. While many are old in years, all are in splendid state of preservation. The collection is undoubtedly the finest of its kind ever presented to the Guard. Captain Schmidt has never believed in doing things half way, and the weapons are mounted in a handsome hand-made quartered oak case, the top of which contains the Keystone emblem and the regimental figure 3. Later, a plate containing the name of the successful company will be placed on the door. A copy of the contents of the collection will be placed in the regimental archives, while another will be sent to the State authorities at Harrisburg.

The list of articles of the collection follows:

1. Revolutionary Flat Powder Horn with detachable brass measuring charger, 1740-1800.

2. Round Powder Horn, in use at the end of the Revolutionary War, 1812. From Pittsburgh Arsenal.

3. Seventeenth Century Blunderbuss, from Lord Wolsley's collection. Made by Hale. Length of barrel, 12 inches; diameter of bell-mouthed muzzle, 3 1-2 inches.

4 and 5. Revolutionary Flint Lock Officer's Pistols. Made by G. Berleur. Similar to the pair now in the Virginia Historical Society.

6. Percussion Pistol. (Altered from Flint Lock). Marked A. Waters, Millbury, Mass, 1847. Mexican War period.

7. Ketland & Co., London, Flint Lock Pistol marked with Old English Proof Marks, Crown, Halberts, etc. Brass barrel part octagonal, brass mounted. Relic of Revolutionary War.

8. Spanish Officer's Percussion Pistol. Made in Bilbao, Spain, by Domingo Arechabaleta, 1837. Used in the Mexican War, 1848.

9. Copper Powder Flask. Similar to No. 10. Marked Batty, 1847, 26 stars. Used in the Civil War.

10. Copper Powder Flask. Marked N. P. Ames, Spread Eagle, 20 stars, clasped hands. U. S. on design containing shield, flags, cannons, pikes, etc., on both sides, 1838. Relic of Mexican and Civil Wars.

11. Six Shot Revolving Pistol (Pepper Box) Percussion, double action self-cocking top hammer. Allen & Thurber's patent, 1837. With ram-rod, bullet mould, and flask for powder and caps. Used in the Mexican War, 1848.

12. Deringer Pocket Pistol. Facsimile of the one used by J. Wilkes Booth when he shot President Abraham Lincoln.

13. Two Officer's Powder Flasks, Colt's patent. Civil War period.

14. Samuel Colt's patented six shot Officer's Revolver, 1864, No. 112313, rifled, percussion, carved ivory hand grip (Eagle and Liberty) attached ram-rod, chased brass mountings, and stage coach "hold up" engraved on cylinder. Relic of the Civil War.

15. Elliott's patented four-barrel pistol made by the Remington Arms Co., self-cocking of the hammer. By pressing springs, barrels raise above frame for loading.

16. Samuel Colt's Officer's Revolver, No. 50688. Chased frame and octagonal barrel, lever ram-rod, silver mounted, walnut hand-grip. Relic of the Civil War.

17. Colt's U. S. Cavalry Pistol, Cap and Ball, patented September 10th, 1855, No. 8899. Relic of the Battle of Gettysburg.

18. Colt's U. S. Cavalry Pistol, percussion, patented September 10th, 1855, No. 25610. Relic of the Battle of Fredericksburg.

19. Remington's U. S. Cavalry Revolver, No. 54368, Cap and Ball. Frame and octagonal barrel blued, brass trigger guard, walnut stock, 1864, used in the Civil War.

20. Remington's Army Revolver, Powder and Ball, new model, marked New Jersey No. 71165. Nickel-plated walnut hand grip. Civil War period.

21. Colt's Automatic Officer's Revolver, patented March 5th, 1895, Hartford, U. S. A. Blued all over, double action, ebony checkered hand grip. 38 cal. Relic of the Spanish-American War.

22. Revolutionary War Officer's Sword and Leather Scabbard, with eagel pommel, brass hilt, one-half of blade blued and engraved "Honour and My Country" on one side, and U. S. Spread Eagle, wreath, and 13 stars on the other.

U. S.

Interspersed with Indian Arrows, and a few rare specimens of Flint Arrow heads.

At the top of the case is a spread eagle flag emblem which saw service in the U. S. Navy.

A CENTURY OF PEACE.

Efforts now under way to celebrate the centennial of a century of peace between the United States and England deserve the commendation of all good citizens. It is to the advantage of both nations to maintain amicable relations and civilization has also advanced through the friendship of the two great countries. It is to be hoped that other nations will participate in the proposed celebration and the movement for universal peace thus adorned. The Journal has long been opposed to war, but holds the view that the maintenance of a well-trained military force and an efficient navy, to be used if necessary, provide the best security to peace. It is to the advantage of the country to remain on friendly terms with all nations, and war is objectionable at the best. The past century has demonstrated that two great governments may maintain peaceful relations, trust each other, and give and take without appealing to arms on the slightest pretext.

The proposed celebration is planned to take place next year, on the anniversary of the Treaty of Ghent, and the most prominent men of both nations will participate. Only recently, a Parliamentary Peace Conference was held in New York, and the following statement explantory of the movement was issued:

"Representatives of Great Britain, of Newfoundland, of the United States, of the Dominion of Canada, of the Commonwealth of Australia, and of the Municipality of Ghent, having been in conference concerning an appropriate celebration of the centenary of the signing of the Treaty of Ghent, which marked the end of the last international war between the British and American peoples, unite in offering to the governments and the peoples of the civilized world an earnest invitation to take part in making this celebration in every way worthy of the one hundred years of peace that it commemorates.

"We invite such co-operation to the end that it may be made clear and unmistakable to public opinion everywhere that the time has come when international rivalries and differences, though numerous and severe, may be settled without the carnage and horrors of war. Although it be unreasonable to disregard the possibility of conflict arising in the future, out of mutual or partial misunderstanding, yet we gratefully recognize that the chances of misunderstanding have been largely eliminated by the degree in which modern science has facilitated intercourse and accelerated communication.

"We are, therefore, encouraged to hope that the development of letters, science and the arts of commerce, industry and finance, of mutual knowledge, trust and good feeling on the part of those who owe different allegiances and who speak different tongues, may profitably absorb the energy of mankind, as well as offer opportunity for the display of the noblest and finest traits of mind and of character.

"Great Britain has been a colonizing nation, and the United States has drawn to its population various and powerful elements from different countries and from different flags. Therefore, a century of peace between Great Britain and her dominions beyond the seas on the one hand and the United States on the other hand touches directly both the interests and the imagination of every land to which Great Britain's sons have gone, as well as those of every nation from which the present-day population of the United States has been drawn. Such a celebration will not only mark the close of a century of exceptional significance and importance, but it will call attention to an example and an ideal that we earnestly hope may be followed and pursued in the years to come. What nations have done nations can do.

"We respectfully request His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and the Secretary of State of the United States to transmit this invitation, through the proper official channels, to the governments of the world, in order that both by the participation of governments and by the co-operation of men of good will in every land this celebration may be so carried out as to mark not merely the close of one hundred years of peace between English speaking peoples, but the opening of what we sincerely trust will be a fresh era of peace and good will between all the nations of the world."

The Division of Militia Affairs, War Department, in its latest bulletin, makes the following announcements:

On June 5, the Secretary of War directed that the policy of authorizing attendance of officers of the Organized Militia at garrison schools be discontinued.

With the passage of the Militia Act of 1903, a limited number of officers of the Organized Militia were authorized to attend garrison schools and receive a course of theoretical instruction. At that time this was the only available method of affording militia officers an opportunity to receive such instruction from Regular Army sources, but since then better facilities have been provided for imparting instruction. These facilities extend such instruction to include not only theoretical, but practical training and to include not only a few, but all officers of the Organized Militia.

These better facilities are supplied through the Inspector-Instructors detailed with the Organized Militia of the several States. In addition to the instruction imparted through the medium of the Inspector-Instructors, the Federal Government lends its assistance at the camps of practical instruction, both joint and State camps.

The discontinuance of the authority for attendance at garrison schools is in no wise a curtailment of opportunities for militia officers to perfect themselves in the more advanced courses since they still have the privilege of attending the service schools.

In response to a request for information regarding payment for mounts furnished officers of the Regular Army detailed to the several encampments of the Organized Militia of a certain State, the Assistant Comptroller of the Treasury, under date of June 9, 1913, has decided that, no specific provision being made for the hire of mounts for Regular Army officers from the State's allotment of the fund appropriated under Section 1661, Revised Statutes, and, unless the hiring of such mounts can be regarded as an expense incident to the object for which the appropriation was made, not prohibited by law and not otherwise provided for, the appropriation in question is not available therefor.

Service under the details authorized by Section 19 of the Militia Act, supra, is a military duty that may be required of any officer in the Regular Army. Therefore, any authorized expense in connection therewith would appear to be an expense incident to service as an officer of the Regular Army. And since such mounts as the Government is authorized to furnish to officers of the Regular Army are provided for in the appropriations for the support of the army, said appropriations are exclusively available for furnishing mounts to such officers as are entitled to be mounted at Government expense. The hiring of mounts for officers of the Regular Army not entitled to be mounted at Government expense would be in the nature of an additional compensation and prohibited by Section 1765, Revised Statutes. The question submitted is answered in the negative.

The contest between the Fourth and Sixth Regiments' rifle teams for the "Fuller Trophy" at Allentown, on July 5, was a splendid exhibition and despite poor conditions resulted in a close competition. It was necessary to shoot during a drizzling rain at the 1,000 yard range, but despite this handicap excellent scores were secured. The Fourth Regiment won the contest by a score of 1323 to 1250. The scores follow:

SERGEANT HARRY F. KENNARD,
Company C, Sixth Infantry. Carnegie Hero.

Among the well-known members of Company C, is Corporal Harry Kennard, who in 1909, was presented with a Carnegie Hero Fund Commission medal for bravery in saving David B. Blair from death by electrocution at Chester, on February 27, of that year.

The Journal takes great pleasure in printing a portion of an unusually brilliant address delivered by Major and Surgeon H. A. Arnold, assigned Sixth Infantry, before the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania. Major Arnold spoke on the "Dietetics and Policing of Camps," and this article is particularly appropriate at this time of the year

Major Arnold said in part:

"Camp grounds should be at all times in good sanitary condition; it is a possibility. What is possible and desirable should be, and if it is not existent, some one is to blame. Combined cleanliness of camp, quarters and person constitute the gospel of camp sanitation. History emphasizes the necessity for this gospel, for filth and disease, traveling hand in hand, have decimated many promising armies.

"It is a common mistake to crowd camps thus preventing access of air and sunshine, furnishing nooks and crannies for undiscovered pollutions, and rendering difficult, efficient ditching. Take interval and distance.

"I shall use the regiment as the unit in presenting this subject, for it requires but adaptation to apply the principles and methods to larger or smaller organizations.

"The regimental commander being responsible for the condition of his camp, appoints each day a superintendent of police, designated as officer of the day, who has command of all guards and prisoners, and is responsible for the order and general well-being of the camp.

"Present regulations make company commanders responsible for the police of quarters, kitchens, company areas, and the personal cleanliness of the men. The major portion of this task is done at an early morning hour, when, at the sounding of police call, each company turns out with a commissioned or non-commissioned officer in charge, and makes a thorough scrutiny of every inch of their camp area, gathering up and removing everything objectionable or unsanitary. This work should be done so thoroughly that the entire camp and its surroundings receive careful attention, not neglecting stables, sinks and kitchens. This work may be continued during the day as required, by the use of prisoners and fatigue details.

"Provision must be made to care for all spigots and water barrels by stone-filled drip wells. Stone-filled ditches must carry off all water tending to create swampy conditions. Ditches must divert all surface water from sinks and tent interiors. Much frequented walks to the rear or elsewhere should be elevated slightly if the ground is wet from drainage or continued rain.

"Consistent with personal cleanliness, curb the soldiers' propensity for profligacy in the use of water, by orders regarding the use of shower bath and wash basin, and prohibiting washing under the spigots.

"All materials removed from camp should be properly disposed of. And here let me remark that seven out of ten police details, if left to their own sweet will, will carry all the refuse to the corner, gully, clump of bushes, or other spot as near as possible beyond the rear guard line and there establish a dump that will soon rival those fringing all our very sanitary cities. However, what is permissible in civil life is not permissible in military, hence the almost immediate discovery by a vigilant medical officer means a new detail on the spot to police the pollution created by the first detail. Watch the disposition of refuse by your police details, and thereby save much trouble. All stones can be used to fill kitchen spider pits, drip well pits, drains, gullies and to build walks. Inflammable materials should be burned at the rear of the camp in a pit used exclusively for that purpose. Horse manure should be removed from all parts of the camp, including stables, daily, lest the infected spots breed flies innumerable. If unable to remove it, have it burned at a convenient distance, with due regard for prevailing winds.

"Other refuse must be carefully buried. He who cleans his own yard, and throws the refuse materials over the fence into his neighbor's yard is a public nuisance, and yet too often carefully policed camps have a fringe of objectionable material, clearly indicating the fact that the policing of camp has resulted in the pollution of its surroundings.

"A common excuse given when you come upon some particularly flagrant exhibition of soil pollution is that it was not done by that company, but by another. My reply is invariably, 'A good soldier never allows any one to pollute his camp. Either make the other fellow clean it up, or clean up the filth yourself. It is your camp and it is up to you to keep it clean.'

"Instruction in and the enforcement of orders calling for sanitation of person of the enlisted man, especially if he has kitchen duties, will be of assistance in procuring clean quarters; for a man is never cleaner than his surroundings. You always find a dirty cook in a dirty kitchen, the soil pollution is seldom found in or around a mess kitchen where the cook is clean of person and clothing.

"Polluted soil must be burned over, dug under, or covered with quick lime, crude oil, or wood ashes from the fire. Lime and wood ashes should be used freely in and about the kitchens, whether evidence of pollution exists or not.

"Fecal Pollution. Soil pollution of a camp or its immediate surroundings by fecal matter should never be tolerated for one minute. Straddle sinks, of one shovel width, should be started as soon as the command halts, immediate notice given of their location and pollution of camp by fecal matter made a serious offense to be severely punished.

"No method for the disposal of fecal matter has yet been devised that is superior to the pit or latrine system, but its efficiency depends upon the gradual return of the excavated earth as a covering for the accumulating excrata. Fly-tight seat boxes should cover these pits. Once a day, or oftener, these boxes should be tilted over, the pit burned out by means of hay or straw sprinkled with crude oil. Odors and insects will not be noticed about sinks so cared for. Urine cans and their sites should receive the same careful attention.

"Should the camp continue on one site for a long time elevated paths should be constructed, white washed or with white washed borders, leading to the sinks and urinals, thus facilitating the use of these instruments of salvation or destruction.

"Stables and picket lines are certain to become polluted and should be removed to new locations at frequent intervals, the ground burned over by using crude oil or other material; lime used freely and the soil dug or plowed under.

"Garbage and Kitchen Refuse. Incessant watchfulness is needed to prevent soil pollution in and around the kitchens. Cooks are careless, and unless checked will soon have garbage, dishwater, coffee grounds and other materials scattered over a wide area. It is now possible for the cook to dispose of all kitchen refuse in the fire that does all cooking but baking, by means of the arrangement I have designated—the spider crematory."

BRIGADIER GENERAL ALBERT J. LOGAN AND HIS STAFF AT CAMP GRIDLEY, ERIE, PA. 1913.

Despite the facts that the National Guard at this time has attained a higher degree of efficiency than at any time in its history and that its service in the militia provides more advantages to young men than ever before, it is a regrettable condition that enlistments were never so difficult. It is a rather strange commentary that in a State in which the citizens have long been renowned for their patriotism the National Guard should have to face a problem in obtaining recruits. This condition, of course, does not apply to Pennsylvania alone, but is general throughout the country. In Pennsylvania, however, a different state of affairs should be expected.

The Journal, however, does not regard the situation as a serious problem, but a condition due primarily to the indifference of the citizens. We are confident that should the country be at any time threatened with war, volunteers would respond in the same hearty manner in which they answered the calls of the sixties. There can be no question of the patriotism of the people. The misapplication of this patriotism, however, presents the real problem. Should the nation be in need, a mob of volunteers would of necessity require months of training to be of any service, and would not be as available as one efficient company of infantry. Here is where the indifference of the public is working injury. Forgetful of the old maxim: "In times of peace prepare for war," our well-meaning though patriotic citizens are doing but little at the most to aid the National Guard, the natural defenders of constitued authority, and are merely trusting to the customary American luck in times of danger.

MAJOR C. B. MEHARD, ADJUTANT GENERAL 2ND BRIGADE AND NON-COMMISSIONED STAFF

Lieutenant Louis E. Fagan, Naval Force of Pennsylvania, Commanding Division A, is about taking an examination for Second Lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps. Lieutenant Fagan is one of the best known militia officers in Pennsylvania, a hard worker, and always on the alert to advance the best interests of his command. The Journal and his many military and naval friends in the Keystone State wish him success in his undertaking.

War Department,
Office of the Chief of Staff,
Division of Militia Affairs.

Circular No. 5.

The following is added to paragraph 234, Militia Regulations, 1910, viz:

All officers and non-commissioned staff officers of engineers are mounted.

In each company maintained at strength at or above the minimum prescribed, but below 100 enlisted, the following enlisted men are mounted, viz: 1 sergeant, 2 corporals and 5 privates, first and second class; when maintained at strength of 100 or more enlisted, 2 sergeants; 3 corporals; 1 cook, and 18 privates, first and second class.

By order of the Secretary of War:

LEONARD WOOD,
Major General, Chief of Staff.

EDITORIAL.

More war talk again emphasizes the necessity of the National Government and of citizens generally giving more concern to the militia of the several States. At the present time, our people are busy discussing the prospects of a war in Mexico and are likewise considering the possibilities of a conflict with Japan. The Journal is no alarmist. We are hopeful that the country will remain at peace for years to come. We are opposed to jingo schemes to arouse the people. We trust that the Mexican difficulties may be settled without our being in any way involved. We prefer to consider the Japanese differences as a bugaboo. But we do believe that the present sudden awakening of the American people to the possibilities of war should serve to good purpose in arousing the public to more genuine interest in the national militia. It is a well-known fact that the Regular Army, though thoroughly efficient, is but a comparatively small body of men, and that without the great reserve force of citizen soldiery, the country is upon a poor war footing contrasted with other great nations. After all, should war at any time be declared, the militia would prove the real test in a conflict. It would take months to drill raw recruits into condition, and in the meantime the trained troops of an enemy could be very busy, provided that there were no competent auxiliaries to aid the standing army. For this reason, it behooves the Federal Government as well as the respective States to do their full duty by the Guardsmen and to give them every aid to develop highly-efficient bodies of soldiers. It goes without saying that one of the most effective methods of assistance would be through means to secure more enlistments and to keep the enrollments up to the highest point. This end cannot be accomplished by the State alone, but must depend to a great degree upon those citizens who come in contact with large forces of young men, and who can use their influence to have them enter the Guard. Finally, and probably most important of all, the conditions call particular attention to the necessity of Congress passing a proper pay-for-drill-attendance bill, which would make the service far more attractive and prove one of the best investments ever made by the National Government.

Colonel A. D. Burns, Sixteenth Infantry, pleasantly surprised the men of Bradford Camp, No. 54, United Spanish War Veterans, when he presented that organization with a beautiful silk banner with streamers on July 17. Colonel Burns was one of the organizers of the camp and is a past commander. He has been most actively interested in its welfare. The camp was instituted on July 20, 1912, and its memebrship is uniformed. Only recently it was awarded a Maine memorial tablet, which it is proposed to mount on a suitable stone and place in the public square at Bradford. The camp will attend in a body the National Encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans at Buffalo, New York, in September. Major L. H. Simons is the present commander.

Colonel William S. McKee, Fourteenth Infantry, it is stated, contemplates a number of changes on the staff of his command. Captain Murray G. Livingston, who for many years has served as Quartermaster of the regiment, owing to the stress of professional duties, will request to be placed on the retired list. His successor is likely to be former Major Robert M. Ewing, one of the leading attorneys of Pittsburgh, and who for many years successfully commanded a company and a battalion in Colonel McKee's regiment. The Fourteenth is reported as having an unusually efficient and well-appearing body of men at Camp Gridley. The regiment is looking forward to its new armory, which is planned for headquarters and one battalion. The building will be located in the heart of the residential section of Pittsburgh and will be easily accessible from other parts of the city. It is confidently predicted that the regiment will enter into a new era of usefulness and splendid service.

The armory of Company B, Sixteenth Regiment, located at Meadville, is rapidly nearing completion, and it is expected that possession will be taken in the fall, when exercises of an elaborate nature will be conducted. Governor Tener and his staff and other prominent officials will be invited to attend the dedication, and it is also hoped that at least two battalions and the regimental band will likewise participate. The administration building was erected for a prominent Judge of Crawford county, who spent approximately $75,000 for the equipment of the structure. It is unusually well appointed and contains hardwood finishings throughout. The site adjoins the Meadville public square and could not be improved upon. The State was indeed fortunate to secure this valuable property. It so happened that Major E. Lowry Humes and Major R. Bruce Gamble learned that the building and site were to be offered at sheriff's sale, and promptly agreed to take the property over on the risk of the State acting upon their initiative. Captain Clyde and the members of Company B feel very grateful to the two officers for their zeal in the matter.

NOTES

During the Second Brigade encampment a number of men at Headquarters' Guard were seen digging ditches with white gloves on. It is stated that several of the regimental commanders expressed their belief to Colonel Sweeney that the organizations would appear to much better advantage without gloves.

The Senior and Junior teams representing the Tenth Regiment at the State matches are all from Captain Kline's Company I.

Major Coulter, of the Tenth Infantry, has on foot a plan for organizing an efficient Machine Gun Company to be stationed at Greensburg. It is proposed to make a detail from the band, which will probably be commanded by Lieutenant Robert B. Herbert. It is Major Coulter's intention to purchase six or eight mules so that the detachment may hold regular mounted drills, and for other than military duty the mules will be hired out for drayage purpose and in this manner it is expected to realize a sufficient sum to meet the expense of their keep.

Company A, of the Sixteenth Infantry, stationed at Corry, commanded by Captain R. D. Brown, reported at Camp Gridley with sixty men and three officers. The personnel of this company consists of the best class of young men in that community. Captain Brown, who is a graduate of the Bordentown Military Institute, is an officer of sterling worth, and is determined to make the company one of the leaders in the State. Recently the company held a banquet at one of the leading hotels in Corry and had as its honored guest Major Clyde D. Wilcox.

Mr. M. W. Saxman, a prominent business man of Latrobe, who is deeply interested in the welfare of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, appreciating the great sacrifices made by the enlisted men for the public good, concluded to present Company M, of the Tenth Infantry, with a handsome pool table and other accessories which will add greatly to their interior comforts and pleasure.

The well-known firm of Tobias & Sheridan, brick manufacturers, of Hamburg, Pa., has been established for seventy-seven years; they are the pioneers in their particular line in eastern Pennsylvania, having erected the first brick house in Hamburg. Mr. Sheridan has had an active career of over forty years. This firm has supplied the brick for a number of State armories and public buildings throughout Pennsylvania.

Captain Ross H. Corbett, formerly Company H, Fourteenth Infantry, is shortly to re-enter the Guard. Captain Corbett left West Point during the first year course to engage in private business. He was formerly auditor for the Pittsburgh Coal Company, and is now engaged in the real estate business in Pittsburgh. He is a son of Colonel Corbett, who had three sons in the Guard.

Colonel Richard Coulter, Jr., is being congratulated upon the success of his Fighting Tenth carrying off the honors for the largest attendance and greatest efficiency at Camp Gridley. The work of the regiment was remarkably good during the manoeuvers. Colonel Coulter in commanding a provisional brigade opposed Colonel Rickards, of the Sixteenth Infantry, who was in charge of a like force, and both officers demonstrated their abilities as acting general commanders.

The Eighteenth Infantry, commanded by Colonel Bigger, made a good showing at the recent Erie encampment, but several of the companies were weak numerically. It is to be regretted that the Eighteenth is having so many changes in the personnel of their officers. It is reported that several of the company commanders will shortly retire from the service and this condition appears to be a constant handicap to the welfare of the organization. Colonel Bigger has proven an able successor to General Logan and deserves a better support in his administration.

Major Bertram L. Succop, one of the live wire officers of the Duquesne Grays, has been induced by his friends to become a candidate for Magistrate at the fall election in Pittsburgh. Major Succop would under any circumstances display unusual abilities in any office, and as a member of the minor judiciary should prove a valuable officer of the Commonwealth.

Announcement has been made that Colonel Richard Coulter, Jr., of the Tenth Infantry, will shortly enlist in the ranks of the benedicts. The Journal congratulates him upon his prospective happy career.

Majors Reed, Corrin, Martin, and Foster, formerly comprising the Second Brigade Staff, and popularly known as the "Big Four," visited the Erie encampment, and were much impressed by the excellent work of the new staff.

The recent encampment at Erie served to bring the field officers and signal service into a better understanding than ever before. Under the old system the field officers were accustomed to dispatch mounted orderlies to convey messages, while under the new conditions a detachment of signal corps men were in constant touch with the movements of each battalion. While the change expedited action, yet many of the field officers failed to grasp the new conditions immediately. Before the completion of the tour of duty, however, the entire system was working smoothly. Strong efforts are now being made by Captain Fassett, the signal officer on detail at the Bureau of Militia Affairs, to have Captain Miller, of Company A, of Pittsburgh, detailed to recruit and organize a new signal corps company in Philadelphia. A signal company consists of four wire and two wireless or radio sections, and with the proposed organization of a second company Pennsylvania would have a full force for its division. While the State has only one company at present, this unit is regarded as one of the very best in the entire country.

Troop H, in conjunction with Company A, of the Signal Corps, has secured a splendid location for a rifle range near Coraopolis. Both units are in daily practice at the range and an increased efficiency in rifle work is expected.

An unfortunate accident marred the success of a movement in which the signal corps participated at Camp Gridley, when Private Anthony O'Connor was thrown from his mount and sustained severe injuries of the head and body. He was taken to the Mercy Hospital, at Pittsburgh, and operated upon. His condition is now reported to be improving. During his period of disability, he will be amply provided for under the military code of the State, which provides for occurrences of this kind.

Thanks to the generosity of Colonel Coulter, it is said, Greensburg has more than raised the fund required to secure the much desired new armory for Tenth Infantry headquarters and for Company I. The personal contributions will permit the building to be much larger and more pretentious than the customary one company armory, and will be a structure of which the State may be justly proud. In addition to making the armory possible, Colonel Coulter, it is announced, has also agreed to equip the building throughout, another generous donation which once more demonstrates the zeal of the commanding officer for his regiment.

GENERAL WILLIS J. HULINGS.

The proposed candidacy of General Willis J. Hulings for Governor of Pennsylvania at the 1914 election has created much interest in the National Guard, with which he was so actively identified for so many years. General Hulings is unquestionably popular, as has been demonstrated by his elections to the State Senate and to the U. S. House of Representatives. His abilities are of the highest order. He has long been devoted to the cause of the National Guard, and is a stalwart champion of the pay for drill attendance.
